JENNIFER ANISTON
I'M HAPPY NOT BEING 'PERFECT'

BY AILI NAHAS

At 46, Jennifer Aniston is still a radiant California girl with the honey-colored hair, glowing skin and warm personality that made her a star. Chatting with People in Beverly Hills, the Aveeno spokeswoman shared a few tips for staying gorgeous in a town filled with young pop queens and models. There's plenty of water and cardio involved, and she's trying to quit tanning. But she doesn't starve herself and swears by the eggs that come from the coop at her Bel Air estate. Then there's the sunny optimism that Aniston sends out like beams of light. "Whether it's waking up and seeing my dogs being adorable or a gorgeous sunset, there is beauty everywhere," says the actress, who has been contentedly engaged to Justin Theroux, 43, since August 2012. Here are a few more of her secrets to happiness—and looking really good.

Aniston keeps her mind and body healthy with spinning and Bar Method classes and meditation, which she calls "a game changer."

Be honest: What are your vices? Greasy food is my indulgence, but anything is fine in moderation. Sun is a big vice! One of my big regrets is not being → great as a kid with sunscreen. And eyedrop overuse. It's a weird habit. I overuse them.

ETHAN MILLER/GETTY IMAGES

Do you wear makeup away from the cameras? I'm less attached to it now. And Justin loves me without. But he likes it when I smoke up my eyes!

Are beauty standards for women improving? We're going to feel good about ourselves if we see another woman who is 50 and rocking it. If society is telling you to sit it out after 40, you diminish yourself. Believe what you feel. If you feel crappy about yourself, it's going to show.

What is the best thing that's happened in your 40s? Besides Justin? He was the best thing. But just being in my 40s, everything you worry about in your 20s and your 30s, that just falls away. It's a real relief!

What do you think of young women getting Botox? Kids are doing everything too young! Lip fillers, makeup on 10-year-olds, getting facials. And these damn cell phones! Kids aren't speaking to each other anymore.

Are you on social media? No! I had to do a takeover of [my hair-care line] Living Proof for the day, and I was so stressed out, sweating bullets. It was too much pressure. For these Kardashians, it's a career!

You and Justin have a good his-and-hers style. It's merged. We met a bit in the middle. For Justin it's winter from the waist down all year round. That's his motto. We met when they were shooting Tropic Thunder in Hawaii, and he was wearing black black black. I started to sweat just looking at him!

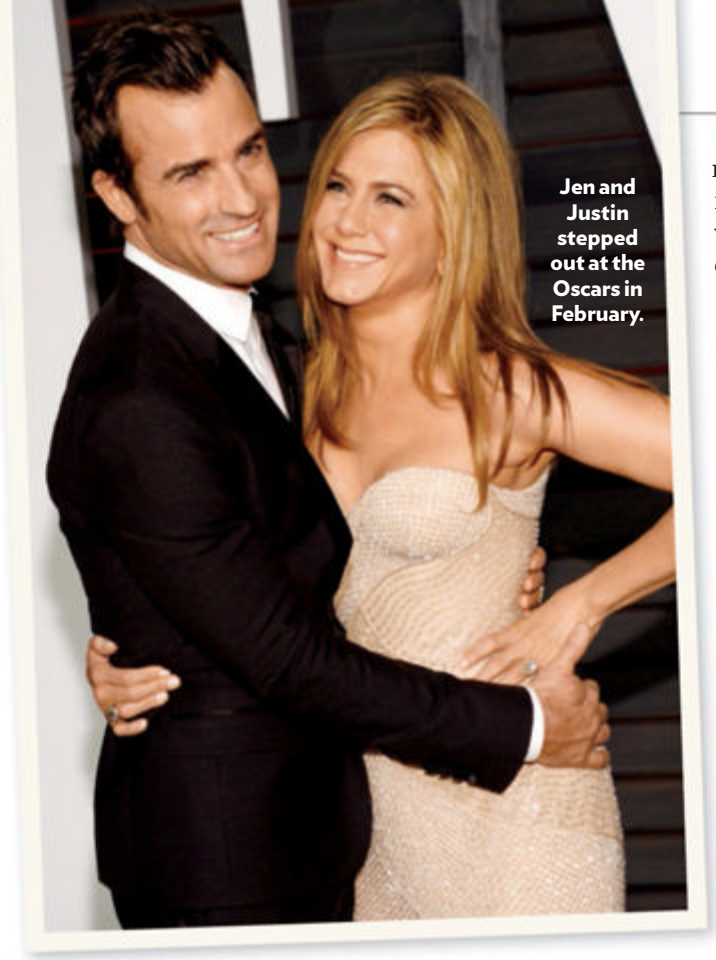

You're playing with your gorgeous engagement ring. Used to it yet? Never! I always play with it. I just think it's so beautiful. I've never had anything so big on my hand. I love it because he picked it, put it into a setting and it's simple. It doesn't feel gaudy.

Justin wears jewelry too. Yeah, he's got a lot of hardware. He wears a chain. He has a gold chunky ring. It won't be a problem when we get married: He will be wearing his ring! It just won't say "Justin" anymore.

It can say "Jen." Yes, maybe on the inside!

You guys keep chickens. Do they have names? We attempted to do that, but there are 17 of them now. We did get two baby chicks as a gift named Justin and Jen. I've lost track because they all look alike! We use the eggs every day. We make frittatas, carbonara. Justin makes great pasta. I use the eggs in my salad or for snacks. They taste delicious!

To some people it seems you have a perfect life. That's a misconception. News flash! I can't say it's a perfect life. I don't know what that looks like. But it's my life. And it's perfect for me.

Jen and Justin stepped out at the Oscars in February.

'AS THEY GROW OLDER, WOMEN SHOULD BE CELEBRATED, LOOKED AT AND SPOKEN TO AS VIBRANT, RELEVANT AND GORGEOUS'
–JENNIFER ANISTON

Jen's Guide to Looking Great!

Down the H_2O
"I drink water endlessly. Now it's just such habit. There are so many lazy water drinkers!"

Stay Sun Safe
"I gave myself a sun-tanning intervention. I use Aveeno Positively Radiant Daily Moisturizer SPF 15."

Don't Follow Trends
"The skinny jean is a horrible jean for me! When is that going to go away? I'm happy with a bell-bottom or a boot cut."

Put on a Natural Face
"When I was filming Cake, I didn't wear any makeup. I was taken aback by how nervous I got. But then I just let go and didn't care. Makeup can be a security blanket, and this released me from that."

JESSA & JILL

HOW THEY'RE COPING

The oldest of Jim Bob and Michelle's 19 children, Josh was investigated in 2006 for molesting four of his sisters as well as a family babysitter in 2002 and 2003.

It should have been a happy time for the Duggar sisters. Jill, 24, had just welcomed a baby boy in April, less than a year after her wedding to Derick Dillard; her sister Jessa, 22, had just announced that she and her husband of seven months, Ben Seewald, were expecting on their first anniversary. But after news broke May 21 that their older brother Josh, 27, had once been investigated for molesting five underage girls—including four of his sisters—a source close to the situation tells PEOPLE that Jill and Jessa felt "sorrow and anger" to see the Duggar family's long-held secret exposed, especially because they believed the matter was long behind them. "When I heard the police report had been released, I said, 'What right do they have to do this?' We're victims," Jill told Fox News's Megyn Kelly in a June 5 interview.

Now the pair are grappling with the realization that the wholesome image put forth on TLC's reality series 19 Kids and Counting may be irreparably damaged. "They feel that their privacy has been violated . . . and it caused unnecessary pain," adds a close family friend. "But they are glad their story has been given an opportunity to be voiced."

'THEY JUST FEEL HORRIBLE THAT THIS IS NOW PUBLIC KNOWLEDGE. . . . THEY CONTINUE TO FEEL DEVASTATED'
—A SOURCE CLOSE TO THE DUGGARS

Both sisters insisted that they had long ago forgiven their brother for his transgressions—and defended him as "just a little too curious about girls" to Kelly. "In their minds they suffered very little from what Josh did and are in much more pain now because of the report being published," says the source close to the situation. "It's not like falling and scraping your knee where it bleeds, it scabs, it heals over," says Gail Wyatt, Ph.D., director of the UCLA Sexual Health program. "It's not a normal childhood experience in that sense, that you can blow it off and assume there won't be repercussions because of it. That Josh apologized is important but does not suggest that everything is okay."

Though the future of their show is unclear, Jill and Jessa "do want to be able to return to a life in public," says the source close to the situation, adding that they identified themselves "to avoid endless games of 'Which ones did Josh hurt?'" For now, "they are content to keep lying low, but they don't want people to think they're living their lives cloaked in shame. They hope to regain some semblance of normalcy."

SWEDISH ROYALS
WEDDING GLAMOUR

SHE'S A FORMER reality TV star, he's a racecar driver, and together they're hot where it's cold: Sweden's Prince Carl Philip, 36, and Sofia Hellqvist, 30, are set to wed at the Royal Palace in Stockholm on June 13. "I don't think I knew the magic of love before I met Sofia," the prince said in a recent interview, while Sofia—who is expected to choose a gown by a Swedish designer—called her groom "my best friend." Do his parents approve? "I felt welcome from day one," Hellqvist, a former yoga teacher, has said.

PERSONAL STORIES ABOUT GIVING BACK

The Cookout is "a lot of fun," says Kimmel (at 2013's event).

Jimmy Kimmel

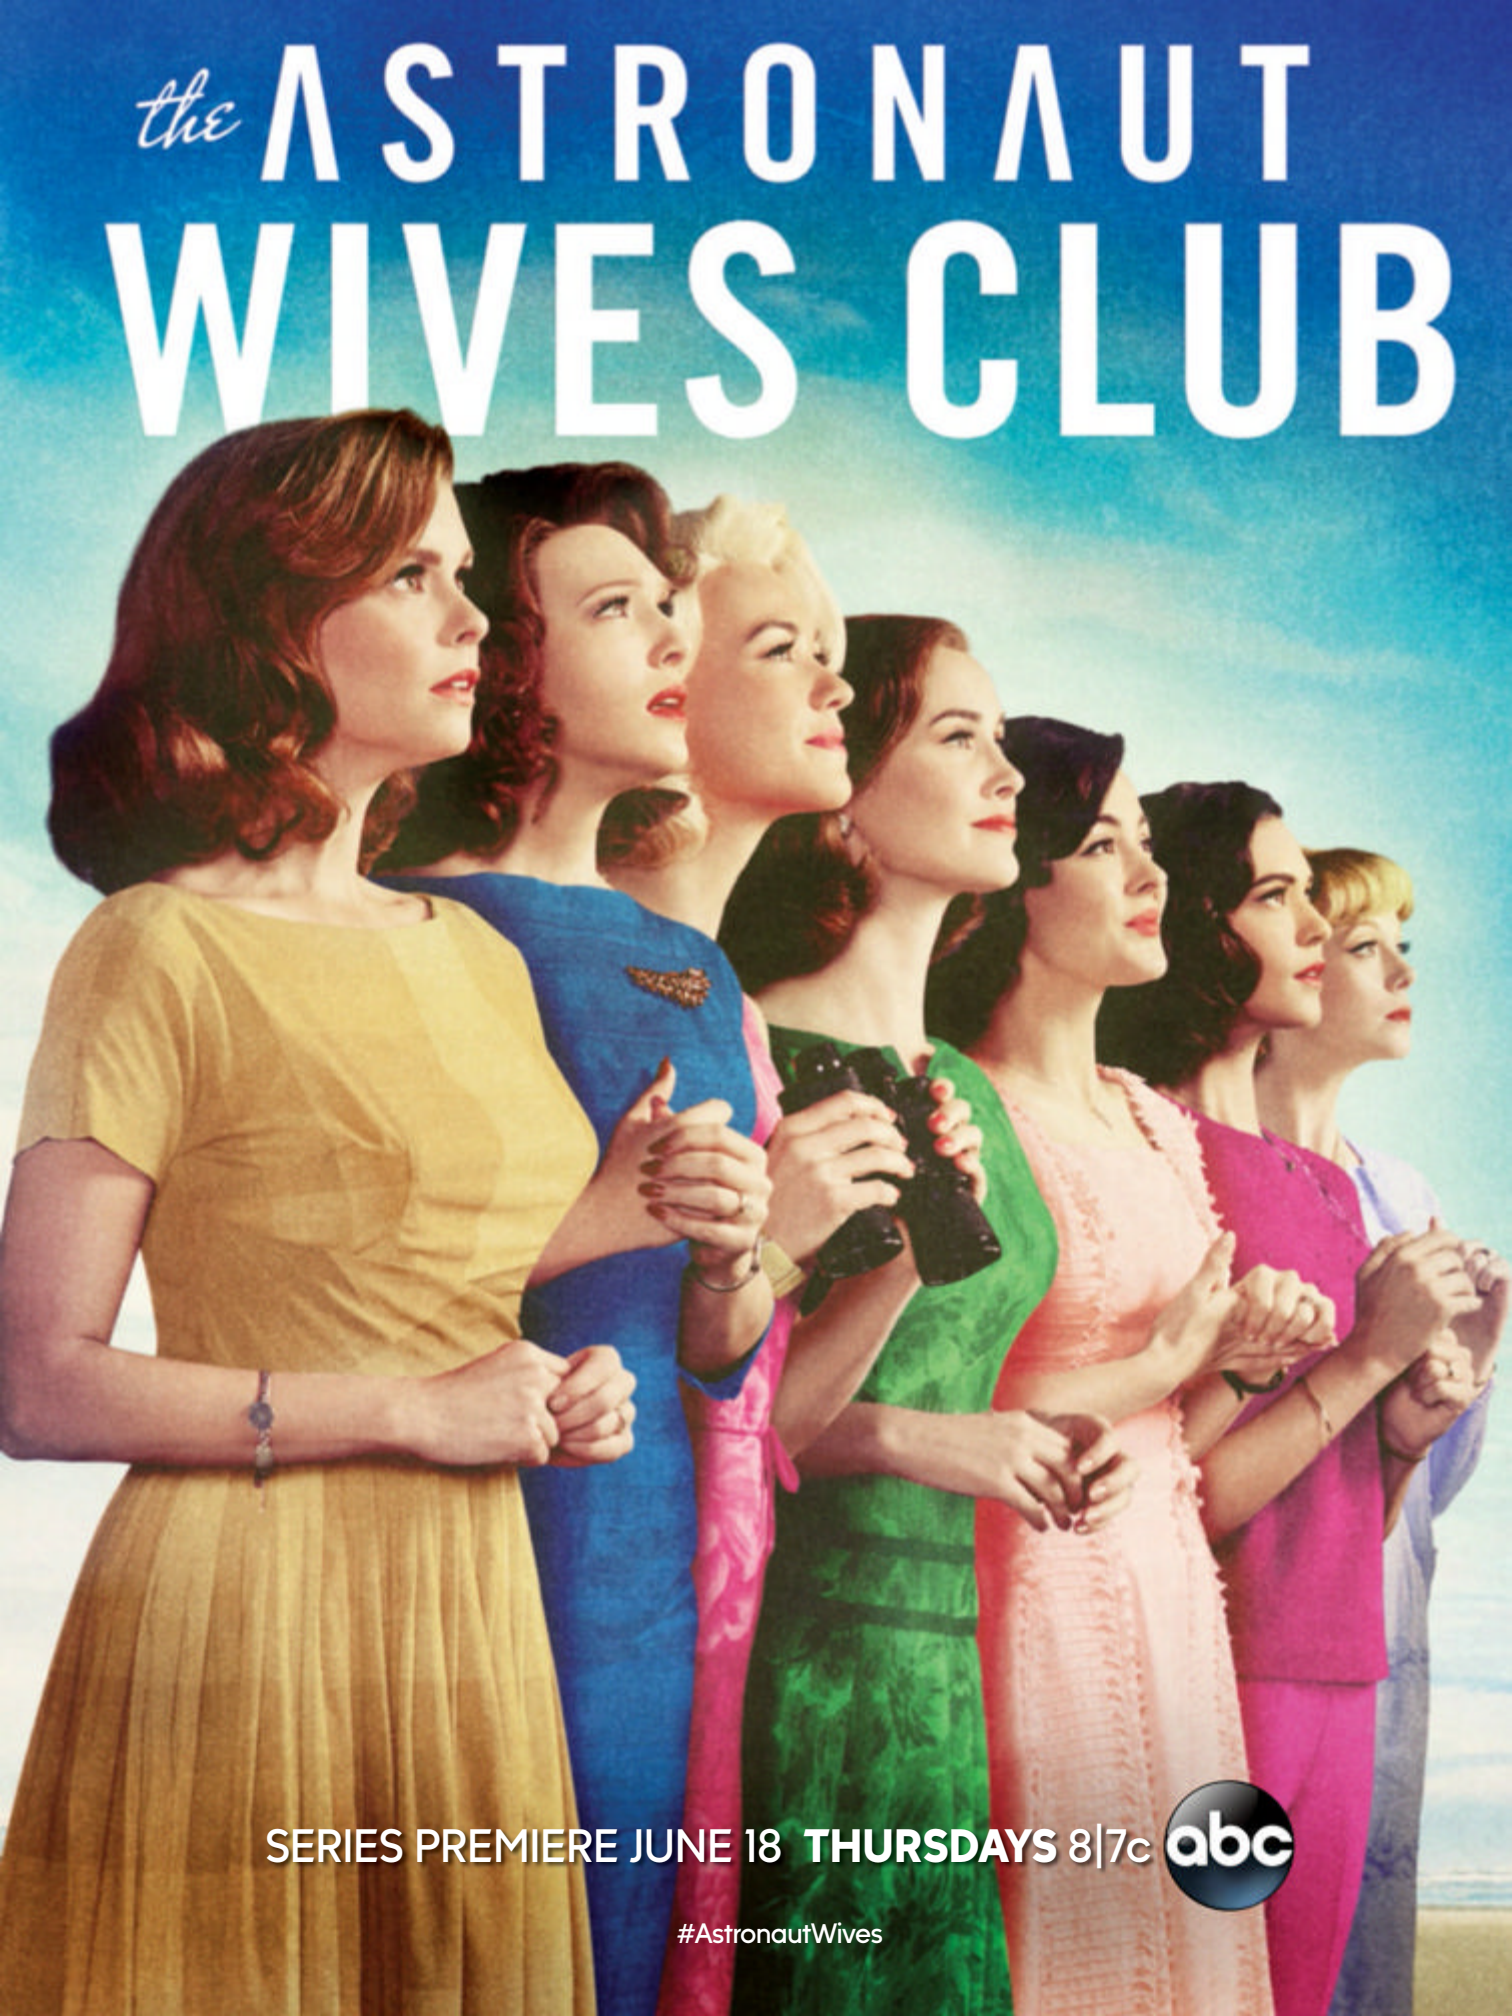

The talk show host, 47, joins the fight against childhood cancer

Alex's Lemonade Stand is a very special charity started by a little girl named Alex. She had cancer and she started a lemonade stand to raise money—not for herself, but for other kids who had cancer. She died when she was 8, and her parents continued the foundation in her memory. I'm the emcee at the L.A. Loves Alex's Lemonade Culinary Cookout. I try to get chefs to be a part of it, and I encourage people to attend. Everyone sets up little food stands. It's fantastic and it's moving—and the food is really great too. I've had many relatives die of cancer, but for me this is more about being a parent and seeing other parents who decided that instead of just being devastated, they were going to do something to help others in memory of their daughter.

A DOZEN COOL THINGS TO SEE, HEAR, READ AND DOWNLOAD THIS WEEK

AMBLIN ENTERTAINMENT/UNIVERSAL PICTURES (3)

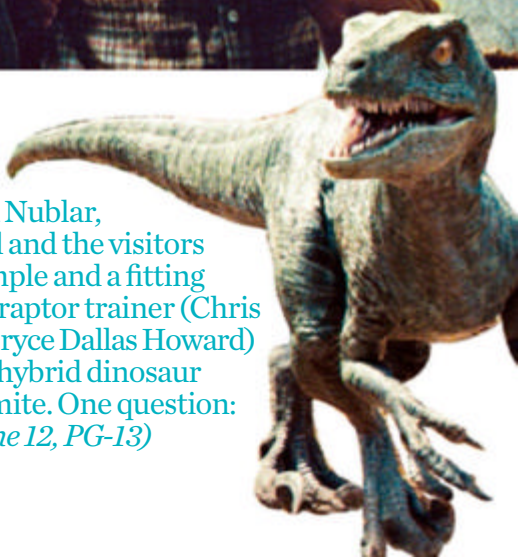

No. 1

Jurassic World

This high-tech reboot has plenty of bite

MOVIE ADVENTURE Welcome back to Isla Nublar, where the rides are a techy thrill and the visitors are snacks. The premise is delightfully simple and a fitting tribute to Spielberg's '93 original: A burly raptor trainer (Chris Pratt) teams up with the park operations manager (Bryce Dallas Howard) to save the day—and her nephews—when a genetic-hybrid dinosaur runs rogue. The special effects make this one dino-mite. One question: Why doesn't Howard ever ditch the high heels? (June 12, PG-13)

OUT OF SOLITUDE: Taylor Schilling (left) and Laura Prepon.

No. 2 Orange Is the New Black

Even though these women all broke the law, you'll just wish life would give them a break

NETFLIX COMEDY/DRAMA Season 3 brings us a series that has gradually puzzled out, by trial and error, how to encompass enormous territory—not just the grounds of the Litchfield Federal Correctional Institution for women, but also the emotional cells and corridors in which the inmates' souls are imprisoned and, occasionally, connected. It's smart and heartfelt. Red (Kate Mulgrew) suffers another staggering blow to her pride. Piper (Taylor Schilling) hooks up again with Alex (Laura Prepon). And the prison itself faces a sort of reckoning. So: Lock yourself away for a weekend binge. (Streaming June 12)

Amy Poehler as Midwest councilwoman Leslie Knope.

No. 3 Parks and Recreation: The Complete Series

DVD+STREAMING COMEDY Amy Poehler's small-town sitcom was a seedling that grew into a fine oak offering ample shade, secure branches for squirrels and.... Anyway, the point is that Parks took form with a slow, sweet, satisfying naturalness. It was funny too, and sly and indulgent when it came to Pawnee's blissfully uninformed citizens—including newscaster Perd Hapley (Jay Jackson), who thought centaurs might be real.

No. 4 Nate Ruess, Grand Romantic

MUSIC INDIE-POP He may be on hiatus from his band Fun, but Ruess is still having a good time with this solo debut. As on Fun's 2012 breakout Some Nights, he flies high on hooky anthems, thanks to the range and athleticism of his Freddie Mercury-esque vocals. "Great Big Storm" finds him weathering a world gone wrong—and getting you to sing along. (June 16)

The two-time Grammy winner is in grand form on his own.

The up-and-comers: Cooke, Mann and Cyler.

No. 5 Me and Earl and the Dying Girl

MOVIE COMEDY/DRAMA Based on a young-adult novel, the vibrantly inventive Earl does the coming-of-age genre proud. High school pals Greg (Thomas Mann) and Earl (scene-stealer RJ Cyler) befriend sick classmate Rachel (Olivia Cooke), while shooting awful twists on classic movies in their downtime. (Death in Tennis, anyone?) Theirs is an odd though poignant friendship, with jangly bits and rough edges, but it's a funny one all the same. (June 12, PG-13)

No. 6 Adam Lambert, The Original High

The American Idol alum makes a bold move

MUSIC POP With its brooding, sexy vibe, Lambert's third album sounds miles away from American Idol—miles away, in fact, from America. As it happens, the vocal powerhouse sought inspiration across the pond, teaming with a slew of Swedish hitmakers (including producers Max Martin and Shellback and synth-pop breakout Tove Lo) to deliver his most emotional set yet. Whether singing about heartbreak ("Things I Didn't Say") or chaotic affairs ("Evil in the Night"), Lambert is totally at home with the grungy electro beat. (June 16)

Glamberts have been waiting three years for their idol to return with a new LP.

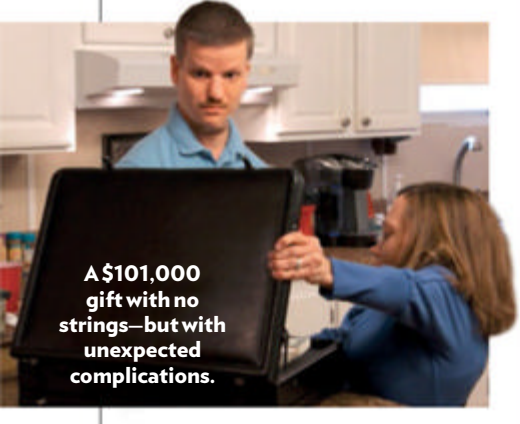

FROM TOP: ANNE MARIE FOX/TWENTIETH CENTURY FOX; DAVID ROEMER

In this subtitled German series, Jonas Nay becomes a spy at the bidding of Maria Schrader.

No. 7 Deutschland 83

TV DRAMA What sealed the fate of Communist East Germany back in the early 1980s? Was it Ronald Reagan's military toughness—or that addictive West German pop hit "99 Red Balloons" throbbing on the radio? Both play a part in an icily intelligent thriller about a Communist border guard (Jonas Nay) who's recruited by his aunt to spy on the other side of the Berlin Wall. It's very reminiscent of The Americans, only in German: Die Deutschen. (Sundance, June 17, 11 p.m)

A $101,000 gift with no strings—but with unexpected complications.

No. 8 The Briefcase

TV REALITY A family is drowning financially until a camera crew arrives and offers $101,000. They're free to do what they want with the cash—pay the bills, buy a ferret farm—but it's suggested that they might want to share the bounty with another struggling family. The result is a surprisingly intense ethical struggle and a fresh sea of tears. (CBS, Wednesdays, 8 p.m.)

A spectral troublemaker (Marc Warren, right) gives an assist to Mr. Norrell (Eddie Marsan).

No. 9 Jonathan Strange & Mr. Norrell

A magical trip into the English past

TV FANTASY Set in the early 1800s, this rewardingly bizarre miniseries imagines an England where the practice of magic—which would make Harry Potter such a big cheese 200 years later—has gone quiescent: It's now a subject for stout, gouty clubmen to discuss with bloodless timidity. But there are two eccentric exceptions: Feverishly chatty Jonathan Strange (Bertie Carvel) and anxious, close-lipped Gilbert Norrell (Eddie Marsan), who looks like a teapot in need of a cozy. Their spells will not only transcend witchcraft—they'll shape statecraft. (BBC America, June 13, 10 p.m.)

No. 10 Giorgio Moroder, Déjà Vu

MUSIC ELECTRONIC At 75, dance pioneer Moroder is still ahead of the curve on his first full-length LP in 30 years. The Italian deejay-producer, who masterminded Donna Summer's most shimmery disco hits back in the day, snagged contemporary talent to sing over synthy beats on this '70s-inspired collection. Hearing Sia's funky "Déjà Vu" or Charli XCX's glitzy thumper "Diamonds," even wallflowers will want to uproot themselves and head to the dance floor. (June 16)

Escape into New York: Glenn, Eddie and Mukunda Angulo.

No. 11 The Wolfpack

MOVIE DOCUMENTARY Meet the Angulo brothers, all six of them. They grew up in a cramped Manhattan apartment, homeschooled by their mother, rarely allowed to leave by their father. One year they didn't venture out at all. What they knew of the world came from obsessively watching movies. But if their existence was passive, their imaginations were on fire. This Sundance festival winner is a story of survival. Yes, it's crushing, the way the Angulos lived. But the point is, they live. (June 12, R)

No. 12 Summer's Best Books

From seasoned pros and talented newcomers, a batch of engrossing reads for those long lazy days

EDITED BY KIM HUBBARD

Stephen King
Finders Keepers

Proving he's not entirely over the fear of angry readers that he channeled into Misery, King has centered his latest thriller on a crazed fan. After killing his once-favorite author and doing time, Morris pursues a teen who's found the author's notebooks. Spellbinding. (June)

Ann Beattie
The State We're In

Short-story queen Beattie is back with her first new collection in 10 years. Set primarily in Maine, these tales explore the range of emotional states the author is famous for: longing, disaffection, ambivalent love, regret. It's nice to hear her voice again. (August)

Charlotte Silver
Bennington Girls Are Easy

Two spoiled BFFs face postcollegiate life in New York. Riffing on The Group and Girls (if everyone were Marnie), this near-satire is surprisingly insightful and seriously fun. (July)

Sarah Hepola
Blackout

You don't need to be a reformed problem drinker to appreciate Hepola's gripping memoir about the years she lost to alcohol—and the self she rediscovered once she quit. (June)

Caroline Zancan
Local Girls

A Florida bar, restless teens, a movie star and a sudden death. That delectable combo—plus Zancan's eye for the telling detail—makes this first novel a worthy addition to your beach bag. (June)

Elisabeth Egan
A Window Opens

Alice Pearse's new job at a snazzy Amazon-like start-up will boost the family's finances, but can it also strengthen her marriage, allow for quality time with her three kids and nourish her soul? If it sounds too good to be true… Egan's delightful debut is a fresh, funny take on the age-old struggle to have it all. (August)

Stephanie Clifford
Everybody Rise

Dazzled by Manhattan's moneyed elite, a young woman from plain old Maryland pretends she's one of them—until family problems undermine her efforts and open her eyes. (August)

Dean Bakopoulos
Summerlong

As a heat wave oppresses their college town, Claire and Dan act out suppressed urges and drag their neighbors into marital mayhem. A witty read about likable people behaving badly. (June)

PETER ZAMBOUROS(5)

Melissa's FUNNIEST

Melissa McCarthy knows comedy. From her Oscar-nominated turn as a bawdy, overly self-confident sister of the groom in Bridesmaids to her office wallflower turned secret agent in Spy, she prides herself on finding the streak of sanity in the craziest of characters. She understands how Hollywood has pigeonholed female comedians—and has spent her career smashing out of every box. "I think it was very limited to be funny for a number of years," she says. "[Humor] couldn't be through your personality or actions, you just had to look crazy. And you didn't want to intimidate people and be too smart." How's this for smart: Her movies have earned $1.46 billion worldwide in five years, making McCarthy, at 44, one of Hollywood's most in-demand stars. "I just think that we've gotten rid of, luckily, a lot of those guidelines," she says. "Funny is funny, and it can come in 8 billion different shades and flavors, so I think it's silly to kind of limit it."

No one is stopping her now. Having wrapped her fifth season on CBS's hit series Mike & Molly, for which she won an Emmy in 2011, McCarthy teamed up again with her Bridesmaids and The Heat director and pal Paul Feig (see page 53) to star in Spy, her first big summer action movie, which earned rave reviews and was No. 1 at the box office. Best of all, she got to add "hanging from a helicopter" to her résumé. "Jason Statham was literally crawling up my body like a ladder, and I was like, 'What am I doing and how did I get here? And how delightful is this?' " she says. Adds Feig: "When you're a comedy person, people immediately say, 'Oh, they always do the same thing,' which is not true." With

The Groundlings | 1997-2010

I have a real love for anybody who kind of goes to their own beat. I think they're the most fascinating people on earth. Mike McDonald [her longtime friend and Spy costar] was my teacher at Groundlings [an L.A. improv troupe], and I remember him just being like, "You can't play crazy. Crazy just means in a scene that's in an office, you can run through it screaming about bees." . . . You can play eccentric. You can play someone with a peculiar point of view, but it's always better to know the thought process behind it, [and] I think that is almost always right.

Gilmore Girls | 2000-2007

I got it, like, two weeks before my 30th birthday. That was pretty wild because it was the first time ever that I could actually say I was an actor. It was a really great first show because it gave me great discipline. It shot crazy-fast. A lot happened in an hour. [My character, Sookie] had many, many babies, but never when I was pregnant. Then I finally got pregnant and I was like, "Are you going to make me pregnant again?" And they said no. . . . I was not a pregnant woman where you're like, "I can't even tell!" I was, like, three weeks pregnant and it was like, "What's going on with you?" I think I just waddled through the last season and we never explained why.

MOMENTS

Samantha Who? | 2007-2009

It didn't survive that dang writers' strike.... I was kind of heartbroken.... It was the first time I was like, "Oh, wait, this stuff doesn't always work out as it should."... But God, we had so much fun.... Jen Esposito and I are still really close.... I will not talk to Christina Applegate, not until she changes that last name. I hate apples. No, she's dreamy. They all just got together and I was out of town and I couldn't do it so now I'm just whining about it.

Mike & Molly | 2010-2015

Billy [Gardell] and I got along immediately the first time we read together. We thought, "Oh, that seems nice and easy," like we'd known each other forever.... He's like the big brother I never had.... I said even before the pilot that I had no interest in playing the harping woman. I said, "I can be mad, I can have things that drive me insane and I can be irritated, but the only way this will work is that the couple has to love each other and we both have to screw up." And Billy fully agreed. If he was just dumb and I was just bitchy, I don't know who wants to root for that.

Bridesmaids | 2011

Everybody was pretty worried about [the food poisoning scene] at first when we read it. But it was less gross than it was embarrassing. You, as the audience member, are like, "Oh, thank God that's not me!"... I love when I watch something and I get red because I'm so embarrassed for them. I thoroughly enjoy that.... I think that's a little bit of magic. Kristen [Wiig] with the full upper lip of sweat!... We could barely keep ourselves together. There was a lot of resetting. Someone would lose it [laughing], and then all of us would.

Saturday Night Live | 2011 & 2013

[As Sheila Kelly, the abusive basketball coach...] I truly almost ran down those girls. That golf cart was really souped up... and I wasn't quite sure where the brakes were. I never got to rehearse Lulu Diamonds [the '30s movie star who falls down the stairs on every take]. My biggest fear was sliding down [the stairs] and having my skirt go up. And my parents were there!

The Heat | 2013

Sandra [Bullock] is just one of the coolest, nicest people. That whole bar dance scene somehow felt like we got wasted...and then nine hours passed by and it was almost like a blackout. Literally there was nothing planned, and I don't know how it started. At one point I said, "Can I get tape?"...And then I started taping the forks to my fingers, and Sandy's like, "What are you doing?" And then she was like, "Did you ever tape your face up as a kid?"...And then five hours had passed and we were both choking on water laughing.... You can't believe we're not bombed out of our minds. We were just being idiots.

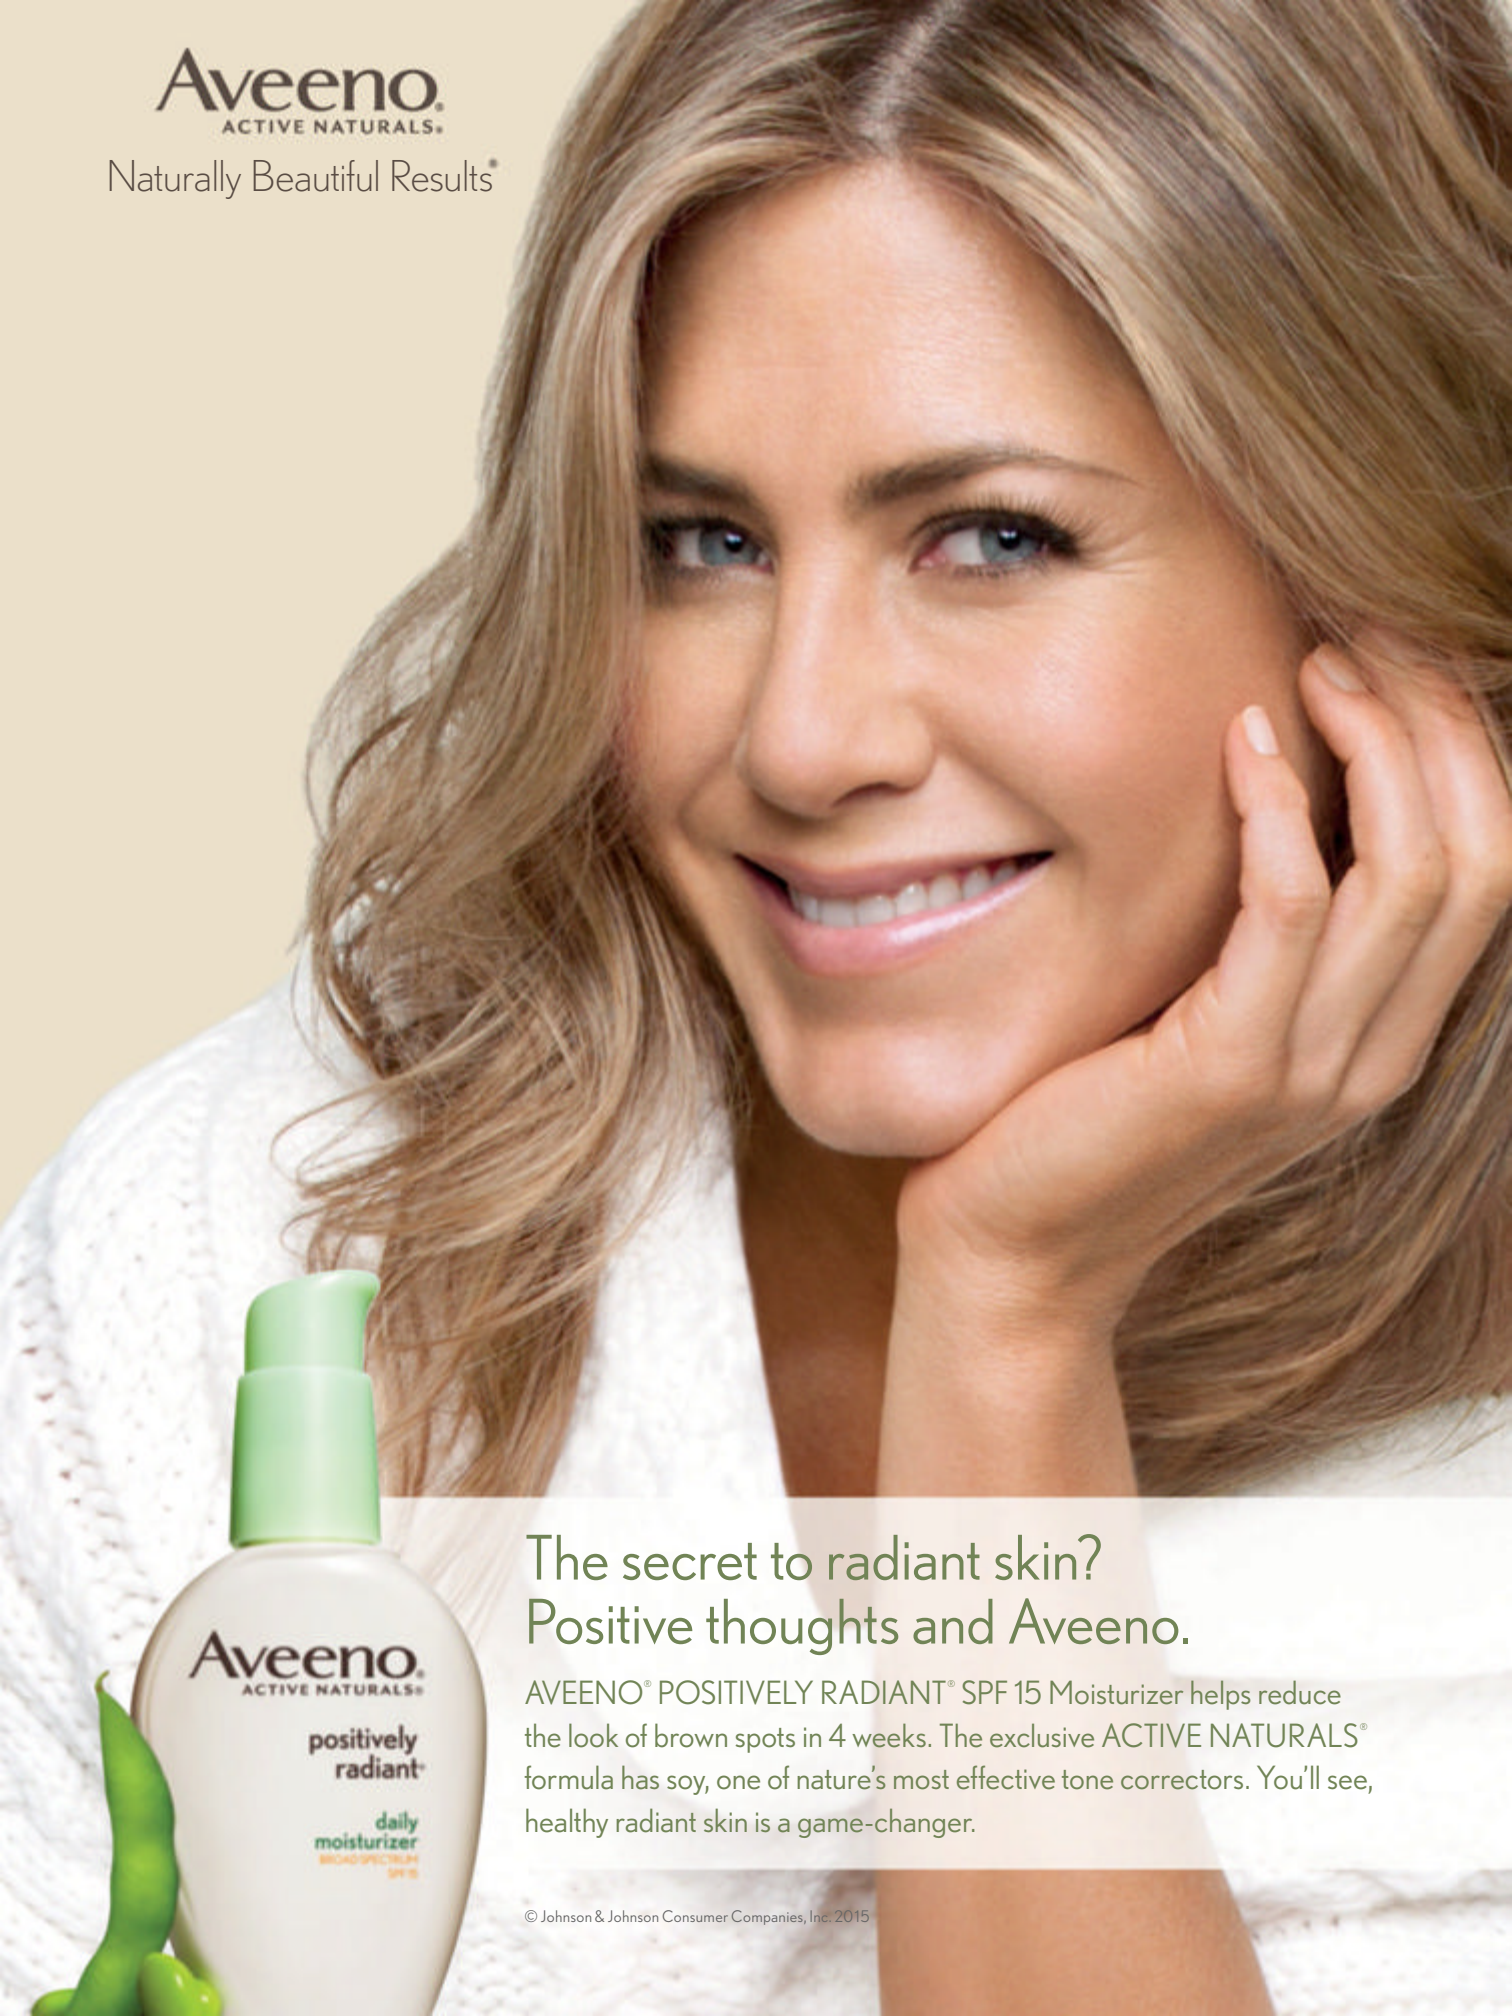

Spy | 2015

I kind of fell in love with my character... because her heart was so in the right place. I tend to really love a character who means well and maybe doesn't have the greatest follow-through.... I may have said [to director Paul Feig], "I know what her hair looks like! I know what wig she wears!"... Usually I go to a wig store and I try on a million things, and the second the right one gets on my head, I'm like, "Oh, God, that's her!" He's like, "You want a permed, short, gray, older woman's wig?" I was like, "Yes!"... I'm the idiot that's always like, "Can I look even worse? Please?"

Melissa's INSPIRING STYLE

Launching her own fashion line was personal for McCarthy. "I started this line because I wanted to know: Where are the normal clothes?" says the actress, whose Melissa McCarthy Seven7 will be available at Lane Bryant and Macy's, as well as on HSN and melissamccarthy.com. "This really is a selfish venture. I wanted to build a better closet for myself." The star says comfort and accessibility are key ("It comes in all sizes," from 4 to 28, because "women do not stop at a size 12"), as she's struggled to find fashion that met with her approval, often recruiting costume designer pals to dress her. "I'd bring in fabric and say, 'Can I just get a tank top made from this that doesn't stop at my belly button?' Later women would ask me, 'Where is that from?' and I'd have to say, 'Oh, I had it made,' like some kind of diva," recalls McCarthy, who has been rocking her own designs (in collaboration with pal Daniella Pearl) on the red carpet recently. "Clothing and fashion should be fun. You're supposed to put it on and then have a little kick in your step that day!"

L.A., May 19
"I dress him up like he's my dolly," says McCarthy of husband Ben Falcone at her star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame. "I like him to look like a Southern Baptist preacher."

N.Y.C., June 1
"I love all those '70s flowing dresses; when I walked, it would billow behind me."

London, May 27
"That python dress made me very happy. You look much better when you're comfy."

Berlin, May 26
"The top's so easy. I love an asymmetrical print—if you swirl the eye around, it's beneficial to everyone."

her, "every performance is different and nuanced."

Sitting down for a video interview in L.A. with People and Entertainment Weekly editorial director Jess Cagle, McCarthy is clearly a power player. But when she gets talking, she seems more Midwestern mom—she's warm, polite, and absolutely loves to laugh. She has always taken full control of her career decisions, from opting to work with her actor-director husband of nine years, Ben Falcone, 41, and becoming a mom—to their daughters Vivian, 8, and Georgie, 5—while she was working on her first hit series, Gilmore Girls (though, ironically, never when her character, Sookie, was also pregnant) to personally picking out her characters' wigs. "When I read a character that I really, really love, I know immediately what they look like," she says. "It's like I want to 100 percent become that person."

When she was growing up outside Plainfield, Ill., the actress says, her imagination ran wild because "it was a very, very tiny, rural farm town. I didn't jump on my bike and run around with the neighborhood kids; it was like me walking around a weird barn by myself." A tennis player and cheerleader in high school, McCarthy performed in only one play, in which she won the role of . . . a cheerleader. "I tried to be like, 'Can I be the old woman?' " she recalls. "I think even then I just wanted a great wig."

Following her passion for fashion, she took classes in clothing design and textiles at Southern Illinois University, "but they were like, 'We're going to make a pot holder.' And I was like, 'I want to make a jumpsuit!' " she says, adding with a laugh, "It hasn't changed to this day; I'm still very jumpsuit-oriented." She left with plans to attend the Fashion Institute of Technology in New York City. She became best friends with future shoe designer Brian Atwood, whom she knew from high school. "Brian dressed me," she says of her first efforts at stand-up. "He was making clothing for, like, size-0 models at FIT that I would wedge myself into . . . and I always had a big wig on and gold swing capes. I told really long, self-involved stories about how amazing I was."

When she quit college to explore comedy, her mom was, oddly, fine with the decision, McCarthy recalls. "She thought fashion would be really risky for me, whereas I guess she thought stand-up was, like, salt of the earth." Decades later she's returning to her original goal: launching her own clothing line, Melissa McCarthy Seven7 (see page 51). "In grade school I started keeping scrapbooks and doing sketches," she says. "Especially through the '80s. I had a whole scrapbook on Gaultier! To get to come back to it is kind of crazy. It's pretty dreamy."

When she met her husband in 1998 at a Groundlings comedy class in L.A., another dream came true. "We knew we got along so well it was like, 'We'd better not screw this up,'" she told People last year. "We were just friends for a couple of years, until finally it was like, 'For the love of God, can we just call it what it is and start dating?'"

A homebody, McCarthy is happiest binge-watching HGTV, which she loves "with such a burning, weird passion," and has sworn to her husband that they have renovated their house for the last time. "I have to rip things down to the studs. Even I am now at a point where I'm like, 'Okay, maybe this needs to be it.'" But her career? That she's always ready to reinvent. Right now, she says, "I'm having the time of my life."

PARTNERS in COMEDY

Thanks to blockbusters such as Bridesmaids and The Heat, director Paul Feig has become Hollywood's king of female-driven comedy. Along the way he's helped McCarthy become a superstar. But the pair, who are close pals off-camera, aren't interested in formula. Early on Feig, 52, played up the actress's gift for physical comedy and had her "come out pretty brash from the start." In Spy, he wanted to show her softer side. "The Melissa I know is very sweet and unassuming. Like, I've never heard her swear in real life, ever," he says. As a performer, he marvels at her fearlessness: "I know she'll push herself to the edge and surprise me." So what can audiences expect for the duo's reboot of Ghostbusters next year? "The original was an awesome idea," Feig adds. "We'll just make it our own."

LOVING EMBRACE With University of St. Andrews art-history graduate Princess Kate behind the lens, the photos were taken at home in Anmer Hall "during private family time," a spokesman tells PEOPLE.

A Kiss for CHARLOTTE!

AS THEY ENJOY THE 'PEACE' OF LIFE AS A FAMILY OF 4 IN THE COUNTRY, WILLIAM AND KATE SHARE THE FIRST PORTRAITS OF THEIR ROYAL CHILDREN

By SIMON PERRY and MICHELLE TAUBER

Trying to perfectly pose a squirmy almost 2-year-old and a needy 2-week-old—on a pristine white backdrop, no less—is like wishing for more sleep at that particular stage of parenthood: It's probably not going to happen. But a couple of weeks after welcoming daughter Charlotte Elizabeth Diana, royal mom Princess Kate gave it her best shot. Picking up her camera (a $2,000 Canon EOS 5D Mark II), the "keen photographer," as a Palace source describes her to People, elicited smiles and bright eyes from her 22-month-old son, Prince George, and newborn Charlotte. "Like other parents, she likes to take photos of her children," the Palace source says of the official portraits, which were snapped inside the family's country home, Anmer Hall, in mid-May and released on June 6. The photos are in part a thank-you to fans from Kate and her husband, Prince William, for the millions of gifts and well-wishes they have received. Says the source: "They have been overwhelmed by public response in the last month."

Behind the doors of their dream house, it's clear that Kate, 33, and William, who turns 33 on June 21, are savoring their new life as parents of two. "They have been spending much of the month enjoying the peace of Anmer and settling in," says a royal insider. William, who resumed his flying training for his civilian job as a helicopter rescue pilot, has served up glimpses into the couple's home life while carrying out various royal duties. Meeting with the English women's soccer team, the Lionesses, on May 20, he apologized for his "tired" eyes and shared that Charlotte is keeping him up while George is every bit the active toddler. "He was saying he never stops moving!" said team captain Steph Houghton.

TWO OF A KIND

ROYAL BABY LOVE!

George's energy—and his mom's devotion—were both on display during a May 31 outing in London's Holland Park, where Kate chased her son on a cold, wet Sunday morning, no nanny in sight. "She was play-acting, and he was running around loving it," an onlooker tells PEOPLE. "It looked like she was pretending to be a monster, flailing her arms about." George, adds the observer, "looked like such a happy lad."

Kate, who has the support of her mom, Carole Middleton, as well as full-time nanny Maria Turrion Borrallo, has also ventured out on several kid-free errands. During a visit to the nearby village of Snettisham several weeks ago, "she was just walking about and taking a break from everything," says a local. Visiting the allotments—garden patches where villagers grow their own produce—"she stopped and said hello to a few of the people working on their plants," adds the local. She was similarly friendly during a visit to café and farm shop Back to the Garden in neighboring Holt, where she picked up fruits, vegetables and meats—plus a treat to bring home. Says a staffer: "She bought a meringue for Prince George!"

As the summer gets into full swing, Kate and William are expected to step out at the annual Trooping the Colour on June 13, followed by Charlotte's July 5 christening at St. Mary Magdalene Church, near their Anmer home. "Lots of people will be out to congratulate them," says Marie-Therese Viney, co-owner of the local Church Farm B and B. "People here are very happy that they have chosen to make themselves a real part of the community."

CHRIS PRATT

HOLLYWOOD'S BIG KID

He's goofy, sexy and sweet—and one proud dad. The Jurassic World star opens up about his favorite role

BY MELODY CHIU

The last year has been a wild ride for Chris Pratt, but it's the little moments with his family—wife Anna Faris and their 2-year-old son Jack—that he still treasures most. Just the other morning, "he snuck into our room and didn't tell us he was in there until we heard him yawn," Pratt says, chuckling. "He just wanted to be there with us. We were like, 'Come on up, buddy!'"

'He's funny and smart and very independent. He's a sweet kid'
—PRATT ON HIS SON JACK

Finding time with loved ones hasn't been easy for the actor, 36, since Guardians of the Galaxy stormed the box office last summer. But "those moments make it all worth it," he says. Now starring in Jurassic World, the newly minted leading man is cheerfully working a ridiculously charming combination of self-deprecating humor, sweet sincerity and a chiseled body that nearly erases all memory of his role as Parks and Recreation's pudgy Andy Dwyer. (His secret? "Basically if it tastes good, stay away from it," he says, though he still loves ice cream and wine.) The regular-guy thing is no act. "Chris is just so openhearted, kind and genuine," says his Jurassic costar Bryce Dallas Howard. On-set, "we talked about our families nonstop. Chris and Anna are incredible parents, and Jack is hilarious."

Born nine weeks premature, Jack spent a month in intensive care but is now thriving. Faris and Jack joined "Pop" (as the toddler calls his dad) in Hawaii for the first half of the six-month shoot. On the weekends, "we'd be out in the water and exploring around the island," says Pratt. But for the New Orleans leg of filming, Faris, 38, returned to Los Angeles with their toddler to work on her CBS show Mom. When he's away Pratt stays in touch with "FaceTime, phone calls, videos, pictures, Skype," he says. "As long as your kid knows that you care and that you're responsible for their upbringing, their childhood is going to be great," he says. "He's never going to have a shortage of love all around him."

"I have the support of a strong partner," says Pratt (above left, with Faris in 2011). Jack (left, with Mom on a family vacation in May) "has been all over the place," says the star, who adds that his family (above right, in 2014) "grounds me."

Celebrating six years of marriage next month, Pratt and Faris make sure to carve out time for themselves. "People focus so much on their kids, [but] it's just as important to focus on your relationship," he says. "Your children are going to leave one day, so you have to maintain a relationship that's going to outlast your child's needs for you."

And what if his career slows down? "It always does," says Pratt of a movie star's trajectory. When it happens, the native of bucolic Lake Stevens, Wash., imagines a low-key life with his family "living near some water where I can fish. I see teaching Jack some things, lots of wine sitting near the fire and laughter." Until then he's taking life "one day at a time to just really enjoy this ride," he says. "Sometimes you have to make a choice to be happy, but for me, I don't have to make that choice too often. I really am just happy." ●

Pratt (in Jurassic) says he's "becoming more comfortable" as a leading man.

My Family Means Everything to Me

THE TONIGHT SHOW HOST OPENS UP ABOUT FATHERHOOD, NEW BABY FRANCES—AND WHAT IT'S LIKE BEING THE ONLY GUY IN HIS HOUSE

By EMILY STROHM

Jimmy Fallon is sitting in his New York City office just hours before hosting The Tonight Show, scrolling through endless pictures of daughters Winnie and Frances. "I just look at photos every second, all day," he tells People. "You become that annoying guy. I said I would never do that, but now it's like, 'Wanna see a picture of my kids?' I'm even showing it to the cabdriver." One can forgive his enthusiasm. After trying for a baby for five years ("It was tough," he says. "We tried, but it just wasn't in the cards for us") Fallon and his wife, Nancy, 48, a producer, welcomed daughter Winnie, now 23 months, via surrogate in 2013. In December they brought home baby No. 2, daughter Frances Cole, now 6 months. And now, riding the high of new parenthood, Fallon

ART STREIBER/AUGUST

says, "I've got the bags under my eyes, but I love every minute of being a dad. I look forward to every single day."

Your book seems like a not-so-subtle hint to your girls. Did you succeed in getting Winnie to say "Dada" first?
I tried everything, but Winnie's first word was still "Mama," so we'll see what happens with Franny. I think my wife is throwing me a bone on this one, because she's always telling the girls, "Oh, Mama loves you, but Dada does too, of course," and "Dada is here," and Dada this or that. I'm like, "All right, you're saying it too much."

What's been the biggest difference having your second child?
I couldn't even walk through my office because of all the gifts we got from people when we had Winnie, but no one really cares about the second baby! Tina Fey gave me a card, but everyone's like, "Yeah, yeah, you did it already—we get it," so I've got to really over-appreciate baby two.

Did you buy all new baby clothes, or does Franny get hand-me-downs?
Poor Franny has no original clothes. Every single thing you're like, "Aww, I remember when Winnie used to wear that," and she's already rolling her eyes like, "When am I getting my own things?"

Did you always know you wanted another baby?
We were happy either way, but if I had my choice, we always wanted a second, so Winnie could have a pal. Growing up, my sister was my best friend, and it's good to have a brother or sister in the house, so they can tell you your hair looks weird before school or you can't wear that.

'I love being a dad. It's exhausting but definitely worth it'
—JIMMY FALLON

What's the cutest thing the girls do?
Winnie's got a sense of humor, and she repeats everything I say, and Franny just sat up for the first time. Rolling over is a big deal, and sitting up is a big deal. Then it gets fun 'cause you can sit them down, and they play with things.

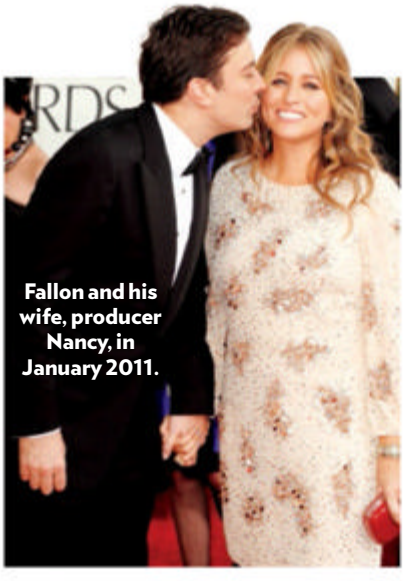

What's been your biggest challenge when it comes to being a dad?
My wife is a natural at this, but I'm still figuring it out. She's already got them in classes where they sing "Wheels on the Bus" and shake rattles. Winnie is already getting smarter than me, which is the sad thing. She's going to be too smart, and I'll have to make her stop taking classes just so I can relate to my own child.

Is reading before bedtime a ritual in the Fallon house?
It's fun, and it's a good part of the day. You're winding down, and you get to bond, you're just holding her, and you have the bottle, and this will be a good book to read. Who knows, it might work. I'm not a doctor or a child psychologist, but I think if this works and everyone's baby's first words are "Dada," then maybe there should be a wing in a university dedicated to the science behind it. ●

"Franny [right] has her own Binkys, but that's about it," says Fallon. "Everything else is hand-me-downs from Winnie" (below, as Ramen Noodle last Halloween).

STORY TIME
"There are two words in the whole thing, so out of all the celebrity books out there, this one is without a doubt written by me," Fallon says of his picture book Your Baby's First Word Will Be Dada (available June 9 at dadabook.com). "But it's got the cutest animals in it, and it's fun. I'm proud of it."

WASHINGTON CULT REVEALED

HORROR IN THE WOODS

POLICE SAY MELFORD WARREN JR. ABUSED HIS 12 CHILDREN—AS PART OF A HIDDEN CULT HE CREATED WITH TWO WOMEN UNDER HIS CONTROL

There were no tents, no sleeping bags, no coolers full of food. All that anyone saw in the remote campsite in Washington State's Teanaway Community Forest were children sitting in stunned silence around an empty picnic table. When a concerned camper alerted authorities last Sept. 15, a deputy initially found three children with ragged haircuts and filthy clothes. Even when police found the children's father, Melford Warren Jr., in a pickup truck with four more children, near the campsite, answers eluded them. "He didn't talk to us," says Kittitas County undersheriff Clayton Myers. Nor did the children. A deputy on the scene noted that he believed he'd stumbled across "some kind of cult activity." "[The children] were taught what to say and what not to say," Myers says. "They had clearly been coached."

Now, police say, the truth is more horrific than they could have ever imagined. On May 21, after an investigation that uncovered severe sexual and physical abuse against some of the group's 12 children, ranging in age from 14 months to 13 years, they arrested Warren Jr., a 43-year-old drifter, along with his two lovers, Shannon Felicia Ann Smith, 41, and Amanjot Kaur Jaswal, 28—whom Warren (and the women themselves) referred to as "breeders." Warren is charged with multiple counts of child molestation, assault and rape and more charges are pending; he has yet to enter a plea. Jaswal and Smith have each been charged with misdemeanor criminal mistreatment and have pleaded not guilty. "The women are under a hypnotic spell or a psychological hold, going along with his schemes," says Kitsap County sheriff's deputy Scott Wilson. "This investigation has just scratched the surface."

'I've never seen a case involving so many children. All of it is very strange'
—DEPUTY SCOTT WILSON

Police reports and court documents detail unspeak-

Police found Warren and seven children at a makeshift campsite.

able abuse, molestation and starvation some of the children allegedly suffered at the hands of Warren, who prevented them all from going to school or seeing doctors. But when the children were taken into protective custody, they initially refused to talk to authorities. Warren was arrested on an outstanding assault warrant but was soon released. "We knew there were bizarro type things going on," says Wilson, "but we didn't have enough to hold him."

Months later the children began to detail the atrocities they'd survived: One of Warren's daughters, age 10, told investigators that her father was raping her in the campsite's woods on the very day she was rescued. A 9-year-old daughter recounted in detail the day her father beat her because she couldn't read. "Her father would hit the children with sticks and bats, put them in cold water and punch them," a police document states. "She said another time her father had burned her hand with a lighter." "Any words I choose would not accurately describe the abuse," says Kitsap County senior deputy prosecutor Cami Lewis. "It's horrifying."

As police closed in, Warren fled his home in Port Orchard, Wash., where the "family" was living, to a campground.

There were some warning signs. In August 2014, Jaswal took her then 14-month-old daughter to Mary Bridge Children's Hospital in Tacoma, Wash., with a broken arm. A social worker called authorities, who determined that Warren had broken the toddler's arm by throwing her against a couch. But after police questioned them at their remote home in Port Orchard, Wash., Warren took several children and fled to the woods.

Those closest to Smith and Jaswal are shocked by the horrors their children revealed. Smith, who was arrested at the Everett, Wash., bakery where she worked, was "sweet," says her boss Joe Rzeczkowski. "But she had this flat affect when she spoke. We all feel duped." Smith remains in jail away from her eight children. Jaswal, who has a nursing degree and is "well educated," according to her attorney Tom Weaver, has been released from jail and can't be alone with any of the four children she had with Warren. Authorities say the investigation is ongoing, but what has been revealed so far has left many shaken. Says deputy Wilson: "This is unlike anything we've ever seen."

MY LIFE in PICTURES

STEVE MARTIN

THE STAR REFLECTS ON LIFE BEFORE FAME, THE HILARIOUS MOMENTS HE'LL NEVER FORGET AND THE FRIENDS WHO MAKE IT ALL WORTHWHILE

BY JENNIFER GARCIA

Steve Martin has played some wild and crazy guys over the years, but sitting down at a corner table at one of his favorite West Hollywood Italian restaurants, the comedian-actor-musician-writer-producer often called a Renaissance man is calm, cerebral and perfectly collected. "It doesn't mean I try to possess it all," says Martin with a quiet laugh. "I'm really not trying to be a Renaissance man, it's just my interests. And by the way, I don't draw, so I can't really be a Renaissance man." Titles aside, Martin, 69, has enjoyed a career that's spanned nearly 50 years, earning him the 43rd American Film Institute Life Achievement Award, a tribute airing on TBS June 13 at 10 p.m. ET/PT. "I'm so honored," he says. Looking back, Martin recalls a screening of his 1989 film Parenthood. "I was driving home and I thought, 'Everyone in this movie is fantastic except for me.' But I drove a little further and thought, 'Wait, Ron Howard didn't hire eight great actors and one lousy one. I must be good too.' And that's what I thought about AFI. I guess I've earned it."

A MAGICAL START
He worked as a magician (below, in the 1960s), then tried stand-up comedy (bottom, in the '70s). "I did stand-up comedy for 18 years. Ten years learning, four years refining and then four years of success."

HUMBLE BEGINNINGS, 1950s
Martin (with sister Melinda) spent his early years in Waco, Texas. His mother, Mary Lee, "made all my clothes; she was a seamstress," he recalls.

MUSIC MAN, 1970s
"I started playing the banjo when I was 16; it's been over 50 years," says Martin, who has won three music and two comedy Grammys. "I loved having the banjo in my act early on because I could show people that I could actually do something."

SATURDAY NIGHT LIVE, 1978
Martin hosted the sketch comedy show 15 times throughout his career. "It was really Danny who came up with this idea," he says of the iconic "Wild and Crazy Guys" sketch, with Dan Aykroyd. "_SNL_ was hard work. It was a very exciting time; it felt like we were at the center of the universe."

THE JERK, 1979
After huge success as a stand-up comedian, Martin took a chance in film. "I had no nerves, I was so full of confidence," he explains. "I was so tired of being on the road. And I liked that you could do something and really get it right, and it would stay that way."

THREE AMIGOS, 1986
"I look at this picture and just laugh: three men on a horse!" he says of costars Martin Short, a close pal, and Chevy Chase. "This is where Marty and I met. He's fun, he's thoughtful, he's the life of the party in the best sense. I'm very lucky."

WITH JOHN BELUSHI, 1981
"In my view, he was clean and sober at this time," says Martin of his friend, who died in 1982 of a drug overdose. "I'm sorry he had this darker side to him. He had a self-image of a rebel that he didn't need. But inside I found him to be very sweet and kind."

PENNIES FROM HEAVEN*, 1981
"I didn't know how to dance really at all," says Martin, who was asked to learn to tap-dance for his first musical. "It was about six months [of learning], and then the movie shot for four months and I rehearsed constantly. I was in the best shape of my life. I just remember being at my absolute max at the end, gasping for air."

HIS LOVE, 2007
"She makes it all possible," he says of his wife of seven years, writer Anne Stringfield (in 2009), with whom he has a young daughter. "She has one of the most important qualities a person can have, and that's kindness."

STEVE ON HIS COSTARS

DIANE KEATON
"I was always a little intimidated by Diane," he says of his costar in 1991's Father of the Bride. "You wouldn't believe the things that come out of her mouth."

GOLDIE HAWN
"She has this incredible joie de vivre," he says of his friend and costar in 1999's The Out-of-Towners. "At lunch I would just sit with her and have her talk. She's just so full of life."

QUEEN LATIFAH
"This was a bold movie," he says of Bringing Down the House in 2003. "And she was so game for anything. I knew she was a rapper, and I didn't understand that world. But she was so sweet."

TINA FEY
Before 2008's Baby Mama, "I'd known her a long time on SNL." Fey joked at the AFI tribute that Martin's wife, Anne, is "a younger, thinner, smarter version of me." Says Martin, laughing: "Tina does look like my wife."

Lessons from My Father

IN HONOR OF FATHER'S DAY, WE ASKED 5 STARS TO TELL US THE MOST IMPORTANT THINGS THEY LEARNED FROM THEIR DADS

Jurassic World star Bryce Dallas HOWARD, 34, and director Ron HOWARD, 61

HE SHOWED ME HOW TO MAKE CHILDHOOD MAGICAL

My earliest memories of my dad are of him playing guitar. Every night before bed, he would sing us a beautiful lullaby he wrote for us; to this day it's a song I sing to my kids at night. He made us feel so loved, was (and is) an impeccable example of kindness and integrity and gave us a childhood filled with wonder, stability and respect. My son Theo seems to have inherited his imaginative and artistic mind, and Beatrice, my daughter, is a natural leader (at 3 years old!), just like him. Last Christmas I walked in on him showing Theo episodes of The Andy Griffith Show on YouTube, saying, "This was me when I was your age." Oh, my goodness, my heart could barely take it. My greatest dream is to work with him as an actress. I don't know how many roles I can ask my dad to play in my life, but so far father, best friend, role model and mentor are working out quite well.

I LEARNED TO BE COURAGEOUS

Growing up with my father, I could never be afraid of anything. He would tell me fear only exists between your two ears. Don't be scared—go out and get it! He is the reason I fought so hard for myself and for others. His belief in me was so strong, I couldn't doubt myself. (Although sometimes I tried!) Thank you, Dad, for seeing the power I owned and helping me learn how to find it for myself.

HE TAUGHT ME TO HELP OTHERS

When I was growing up in the Philippines, my dad started an orphanage. He had heard about a baby being thrown away, and he just wasn't going to let that happen. He taught me to stand up for the vulnerable, the widows and orphans—not because it's easy, but because it's right. Dad has three priorities: Jesus, his family and helping others. He is a role model in courage, and he lives a life of true significance. Although his ministry keeps him busy, Dad is my biggest supporter. Throughout my football career, he would fly all the way from the Philippines for my games. He'd then turn around and fly right back. Other people might skip a week, but not my dad. He pushed me hard but never stopped believing in me. So much of who I am is because of my father; he is a living example of what a man should be—and of the man who I am trying to become.

HE ALWAYS PUT FAMILY FIRST

Everybody knew Jack Yearwood. Daddy worked at the local bank in my hometown of Monticello, Ga. He called himself a blue jeans banker, because he was a regular guy. He'd get home in the evening from work and immediately put on his jeans and work shirt and head outside to till a garden, plow a field, build a barn, bail hay or herd cows from one field to another. The only thing my daddy loved more than farming was his family. He taught my sister and me how to garden, how to drive a truck (and change a tire!) and how to play softball and basketball. He taught us honesty in life and in business. But mostly he taught us how to love. He and my mom were a 44-year example of what a marriage should look like. It's been 10 years since I lost my dad, but if I close my eyes, I can still smell the tobacco and the Old Spice—and I can feel those big arms hugging me tight.

Jack and Trisha Yearwood ca. 1973.

I LEARNED RESPONSIBILITY

I never addressed my father as stepdad, as he was the only father I knew. He raised me as any father would, with love, patience, understanding and discipline. It takes a helluva man to raise another man's child as his own, and that's what he did, with no fuss or fanfare. Real men also teach their children about responsibility, so when I returned home from college, my father removed all the phone jacks in the house and installed a pay phone in the family room. He also padlocked the freezer in the kitchen, only giving me access to the refrigerator. Not only would this shape me as a young adult, it was also good material later for my stand-up comedy. Unfortunately my father is no longer with us, but he lived long enough to sit in the audience and experience my success with me. He taught me what it takes to be a man.

ALI WENTWORTH

The Funny Thing About 50

SHE LIKES CATCALLS BUT NOT CROW'S FEET—AND SHE WROTE A BOOK ABOUT IT

BY CATHERINE KAST

"When you get older, things don't bother you as much," says Wentworth (at her home in New York City on May 20). Above: photo of daughter Elliott.

Ali Wentworth puts aging in perspective. "You feel good—as long as you feel like people would still have sex with you," says the 50-year-old actress. "People talk about Helen Mirren like that: 'I would still have sex with Helen Mirren.' That's what it comes down to."

In her new book Happily Ali After, Wentworth spins hilarious tales of parenting, relationships and, yes, getting older. Which is something that her husband, Good Morning America anchor George Stephanopoulos, 54—who last year was dubbed a "sexual icon" by Lena Dunham—does not have to deal with.

"Men get more distinguished as they get older. They just look smarter and more worldly," she says. "Richard Gere has white hair, and everyone's still like, 'Oh, he's so sexy.' But believe me, if he had a wife with white hair, everyone would go, 'Why is Richard Gere married to this old lady?' It's a double standard, but it's not going to change for a long time."

Wentworth doesn't mind a few wrinkles: "You just start to notice, 'Wow, there's a line in my face, and it's not from sleeping on my pillow; it's permanent!' Which I actually think is beautiful on women." But she isn't willing to let herself go white just yet ("I've always highlighted my hair blonde, so I couldn't tell you if I have gray hair!"), even if it means eschewing conventional girl-power reactions in favor of some good old-fashioned flattery. "If I walk by a construction site in midtown Manhattan and not one of those guys looks at me let alone whistles, I'm totally bummed out," she says. "I'm somebody who would normally get really upset, like 'How dare you harass me!' But the ego part of me is like, 'Hello, can you please check me out?' "

In 2012 ego was the reason Wentworth got blepharoplasty—plastic surgery to reduce the bags under her eyes—and she doesn't feel the need to apologize about it. "My eyes were such an issue at work," she says, recalling that on TV-show sets she required frequent makeup touch-ups and lighting adjustments to hide her under-eye circles, which she claims she inherited from her dad. "It started to really eat away at me. I just wanted to fix it and make it go away. So then I thought, 'I get it, I get how you can have something that really bothers you, and it's okay.' " She even documented her journey in a series of online videos, showing graphic post-op bruises and giving gruesome descriptions of discomfort. "I wasn't going to be one of these women who's like, 'I haven't had any work done' or 'I just drink a lot of water,' " she says. "I disclose . . . and I don't judge."

That's not to say that she's gung ho about going under the needle again. "The first thing a friend said to me after I got my eyes done was, 'What are you going to do next?' And I thought, 'I'm done.' "

It may be easy for the mother of daughters Elliott, 12, and Harper, 10, to say that she won't take anymore major antiaging actions, since she's completely comfortable in her own skin. "I'm naked around my kids. I don't parade, but they'll come and talk to me in the shower," she says. "I embrace it and teach them to not be ashamed of their bodies in general, no matter what they look like." Her husband provides just the right kind of encouragement: "All George has to say when I get dressed is, 'You look so pretty,' " she says. "He can even say it robotically and not mean it, but that's all I want to hear. And I'll say, 'You look handsome.' " For Wentworth wisdom does not necessarily come with age. "Insecurities are all kind of infantile," she says. "We're all children deep inside." ●

The Astronaut Wives Club

• "This is a story about sisterhood, friendship and being a strong woman," JoAnna Garcia Swisher, 35, says of this 10-episode series based on the real-life women married to space-race legends like John Glenn and Alan Shepard. "None of those men would have been picked had they not had a model home life. There were a lot of expectations placed on these military wives." Adds costar Yvonne Strahovski, 32: "They were thrown into the limelight and became, in essence, America's first reality stars."

"We're a fractured family that stumbles upon the end of civilization," says Dickens (far left, with Cliff Curtis, Alycia Debnam-Carey and Frank Dillane).

Fear the Walking Dead

• Kim Dickens is not exactly ready for the apocalypse. "Even my earthquake kits are probably expired," the Gone Girl actress admits. But luckily for her, Madison Clark—the high school guidance-counselor-turned-zombie-fighter Dickens plays in this companion series to The Walking Dead—is more prepared. "I really admire how quick she is when making those really tough decisions on how to survive and protect her family," Dickens, 50, says of Madison. "I hope I'd be that quick."

Blunt Talk

STARRING: Patrick Stewart

• The X-Men star, 74, says he observed the Daily Show and Rachel Maddow newsrooms to get into character as Walter Blunt (a "passionate" news broadcaster with a "chaotic and unpredictable" personal life) in this new comedy executive-produced by Family Guy's Seth MacFarlane.

SURPRISE SECRET PROJECT!

A DEADLY ADOPTION

LIFETIME, JUNE 20

STARRING: Will Ferrell, Kristen Wiig, Jessica Lowndes

• It's not a hoax! News of the campy TV-movie spoof may have broken on April Fool's Day, but Ferrell and Wiig will indeed star as a couple looking to adopt (by any means necessary) in the top-secret project.

The movie was announced via a billboard in L.A.

SEX&DRUGS& ROCK&ROLL

FX, JULY 16

STARRING: Denis Leary, John Corbett

• "It takes a lot of work to have that look," Leary, 57, says of playing an aging, failed rock star. "I'm in hair and makeup longer than the girls!"

HBO JUNE 21

WET HOT AMERICAN SUMMER: FIRST DAY OF CAMP

NETFLIX, JULY 31

STARRING: Amy Poehler, Bradley Cooper

• "It was so cool to get to jump back to the past," Poehler, 43, says of reuniting with her now A-list costars (including Paul Rudd and Elizabeth Banks) in this prequel series to their 2001 cult-classic comedy.

Ballers

STARRING: Dwayne Johnson, Anabelle Acosta

• "I literally dreamed of having Spencer's life when I was playing football in high school and at the University of Miami," Johnson, 43, says of the former pro football star he plays in this new behind-the-scenes sports comedy, executive produced by the action star and his pal Mark Wahlberg.

RETURNING SHOWS

CBS
JULY 1

Extant

STARRING: Halle Berry, Jeffrey Dean Morgan

• "There's a sexier, edgier vibe to the show this year," Berry, 48, says of her sci-fi drama's second season, which "starts off in another direction" when Morgan's "übercop of the future" shows up. Adds Morgan, 49: "It errs more on the side of an action thriller with a little bit of Moonlighting thrown in."

MASTERS OF SEX

SHOWTIME, JULY 12

STARRING: Michael Sheen, Lizzy Caplan

• "There are some pretty monumental changes ahead for our intrepid sex researchers," Caplan, 32, teases about season 3 of the titillating drama centered around famed scientists William Masters and Virginia Johnson. "So much of their relationship and work has been shrouded in secrecy; it's all about to get very public."

HBO
JUNE 21

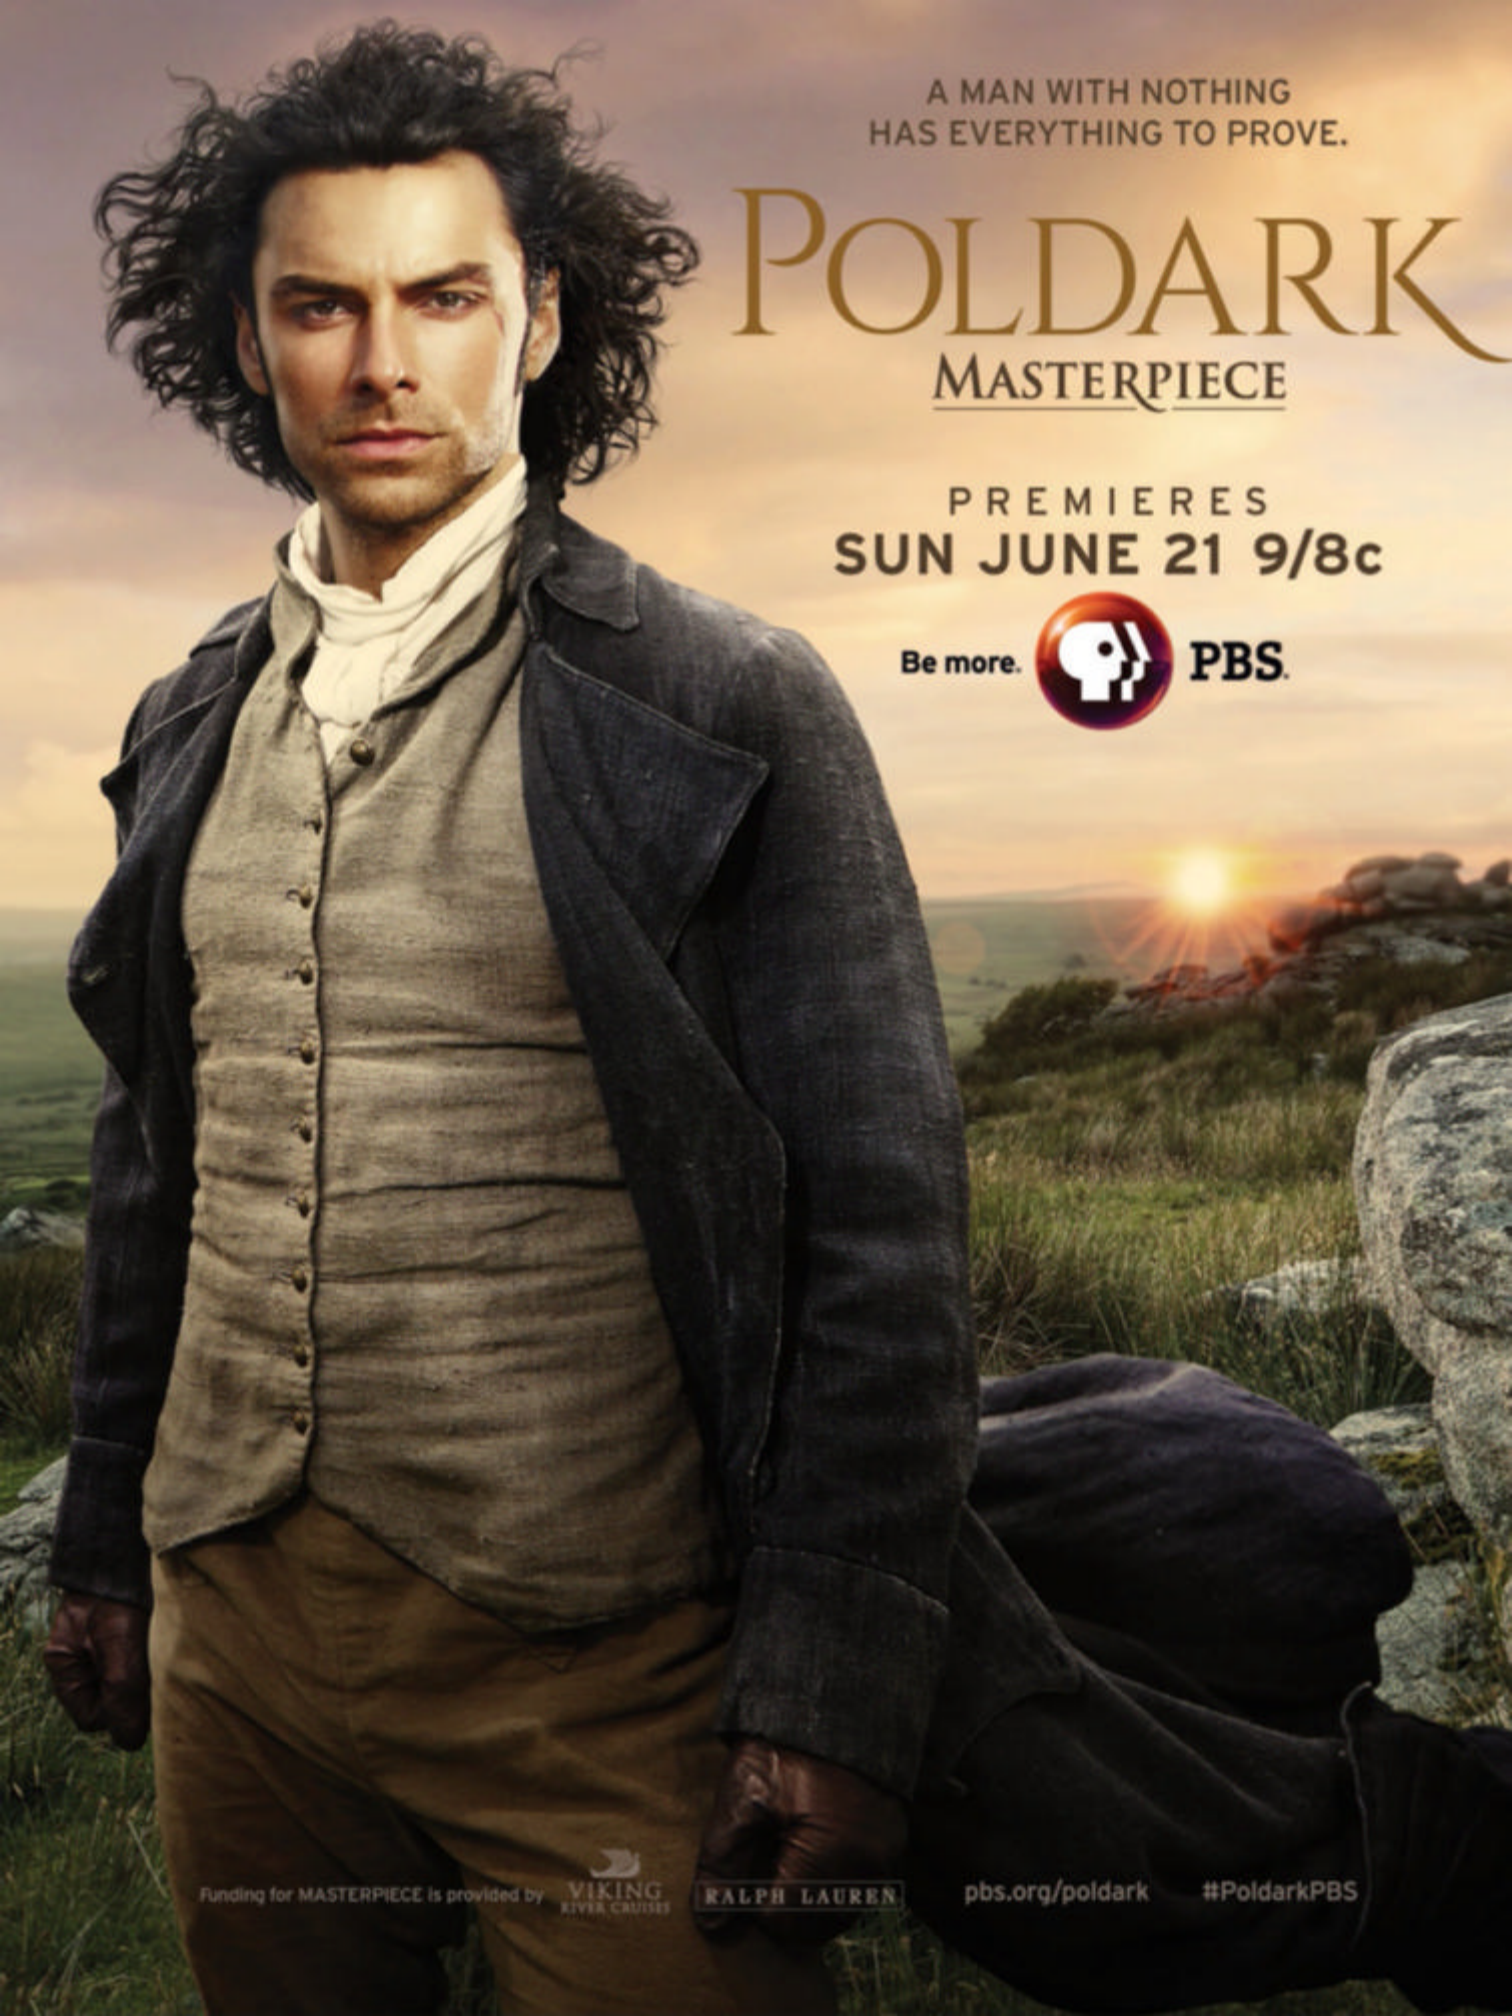

True Detective

STARRING: Rachel McAdams, Vince Vaughn, Colin Farrell, Taylor Kitsch

• "I swore I'd never play a cop again, but I read this and I said, 'Oh, man. It's just so good,'" Farrell, 39, says of joining season 2 of this anthology series, which previously starred Matthew McConaughey.

Ray Donovan

STARRING: Liev Schreiber, Jon Voight, Katie Holmes

• "Ray is trying to master a new skill this year: forgiveness," showrunner David Hollander says of the Hollywood-based fixer (Schreiber) at the center of this dark drama. Season 3 also brings Katie Holmes into the mix as a "troubled young woman" who, Hollander says, "comes from money and secrets."

FALLING SKIES

TNT, JUNE 28

STARRING: Noah Wyle

• The alien-invasion war drama's final season will be "violent and psychologically challenging," promises co-executive producer Olatunde Osunsanmi.

MISTRESSES

ABC, JUNE 18

STARRING: Yunjin Kim, Jes Macallan, Jennifer Esposito, Rochelle Aytes

• With Alyssa Milano now off the show after production moved to Vancouver, Esposito, 43, joins the cast as what she calls "an outrageous, flamboyant, but wounded" designer with a cheating husband.

SALMA HAYEK DOESN'T BELIEVE IN BOTOX

AND WAIT UNTIL YOU HEAR HOW SHE STAYS IN SHAPE

You travel a ton. What's the one product you always bring with you?
My Nuance base (below). It helps get rid of imperfections. I work with the top makeup artists internationally, and whenever I take it out, they're like, "Where can I get this?" "Can I buy your leftovers?" [Editor's note: It's only available in the U.S.]

Nuance Salma Hayek Flawless Finish Liquid Foundation, $14.99; CVS.com

What's the biggest beauty risk you've ever taken?
I don't take really big risks when it comes to beauty. I think a big risk is plastic surgery.

So you'd never get plastic surgery?
I don't know if I would never get plastic surgery. I'm not planning on it right now. I don't believe in Botox, especially when [people] do it so young. They destroy themselves. They keep telling young girls, "Do it young, so you never get wrinkles." No, your face is going to fall. You'll have to keep getting more and more and more each time. So if you're going to do it, I recommend doing it as late as you can.

At 48, what advice would you give your younger self?
I had a great mother who gave it to me, which is wash your face before you go to sleep—no matter what. She and my grandmother told me, "You have to do this for yourself. Just think about how much faster you're going to age if you don't."

When you're tempted to skip it, do you hear them yelling at you?
My God. For decades. Some people have the discipline to exercise in the morning, and I didn't develop that. But I do wash my face before I go to sleep.

Wait, you don't exercise? How do you stay in such great shape?
I don't have time to exercise. I am working. I've had some 20-hour days. But I work with a woman in London who taught me how to hold my body in a way where the muscles are activated all day long. So even when you brush your teeth, you're working the muscles.

You just constantly clench them then?
No, it's restorative yoga. She taught me to tone them without clenching them. You relax them and focus on the parts that need to be used, but never with tension. If you're aware of your body, you'd be surprised by the effect it can have.

Molly Sims 'I'M SO CONTENT'

Introducing
Scarlett May Stuber
BORN
March 25, 2015

"Two kids is definitely a game-changer," says Sims (with her family in April). "It's very busy!"

"She just started smiling," says Sims of Scarlett. "She focuses on my face. It's so sweet!"

She's barely 12 weeks old, but Scarlett Stuber is already racking up the frequent-flyer miles. "She's my travel buddy," says Molly Sims of her daughter with her producer husband, Scott Stuber, 46. "And I make calm babies. She's probably cried six times in her whole life!" Baby No. 1 would be 3-year-old son Brooks, who is adjusting just fine to being a big brother. "He loves her," says Sims. "He calls her his baby sister." And for the 42-year-old model and author, slipping into second-time motherhood has been pretty blissful. "I had much more trepidation with Brooks," says Sims. "I didn't know what I was doing! With her, it's like, okay, you're eating, you're drinking, you're pooping—we're good!" When it comes to baby clothes, "I've become the cliché I didn't think I'd become," admits Sims. "Like, 'What do you want to wear today? Pink or hot pink?'" All in all, life with her family of four is "magic," she says. "I thank God every day."

THE CHEF AT MEXICO'S RANCHO LA PUERTA RESORT CUTS THE FAT AND CALORIES—BY ADDING PEAS!

Per serving: 110 calories, 5.6g fat, 3.5g protein, 5.4g fiber, 13.1g carbs

- 1 cup frozen peas, slightly thawed
- 1 avocado, peeled and pitted
- 2 tbsp. fresh lime or lemon juice
- 1 medium tomato, chopped
- ½ red onion, chopped
- 1 jalapeño or serrano chili, seeded and minced
- 3 tbsp. chopped cilantro
- 1 tsp. minced garlic
- ½ tsp. sea salt
- ½ tsp. freshly ground black pepper

1. In a blender or food processor, puree the peas until smooth.
2. In a medium bowl, mash the avocado with a fork or potato masher. Add the lime juice, tomato, onion, jalapeño, cilantro, garlic, salt and black pepper. Add the peas and mix well. If the guacamole won't be served immediately, press a piece of plastic wrap directly onto the surface to prevent browning.
Serves: 4
Prep time: 10 minutes

Cherry Rosemary Muffins

'THESE SWEET AND SAVORY MUFFINS ARE UNUSUAL BUT REALLY DELICIOUS,' SAYS THE COUNTRY SINGER AND AUTHOR OF AROUND THE TABLE

MARTINA McBRIDE

- 4 cups all-purpose flour
- 1 tsp. kosher salt
- 1½ tbsp. baking powder
- 1½ cups sugar
- 2 medium oranges
- 2 large eggs, beaten
- 1½ cups milk
- ½ cup (1 stick) unsalted butter, melted
- 1½ cups dried cherries, lightly chopped
- 2 tbsp. chopped fresh rosemary

1. Preheat the oven to 375°. Lightly grease or line two 12-cup muffin tins.
2. In a large bowl, whisk together the flour, salt, baking powder and sugar. Grate 2 tbsp. of zest from the oranges and set the zest aside. Then squeeze the oranges to get ½ cup of juice. In a medium bowl, combine the juice, eggs, milk and melted butter.
3. Stir the egg mixture into the flour mixture until just combined. Fold in the zest, cherries and rosemary.
4. Spoon the batter evenly into the muffin tins, filling ¾ of each cup. Bake for 18 to 20 minutes or until a toothpick inserted in the center comes out clean.
Makes: 24
Prep time: 15 minutes
Cook time: 20 minutes

PARMESAN & PECAN
¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese and 1 cup toasted chopped pecans

CHEDDAR & CHIVES
¼ cup chopped chives and 1½ cups grated sharp cheddar cheese

LEMON & THYME
Omit orange juice and rosemary. Add 2 tbsp. thyme, 2 tbsp. lemon zest and ½ cup lemon juice.

Mix It Up
McBride suggests swapping out the cherries and zest for these combos.

One Last Thing

Uzo Aduba

The Emmy winner, 34, stars in the new season of Orange Is the New Black, streaming now on Netflix

Last time I was starstruck
I got to take my mom to the White House, and we sat across from President Obama and First Lady Michelle Obama at dinner. They were everything you want them to be: so smart and lovely.

Last thing I cooked
[The Japanese restaurant] Nobu has the best marinated black cod, so I Googled the recipe. It called for the fish to be marinated for three days, and I was worried it might go bad. I literally trusted some stranger on the Internet with my life. But it worked and was delicious.

Last thing I lost
I don't know if they're actually lost, but one of my favorite pairs of earrings is not where I think it should be. I put them in my purse and now I can't find them. They were these little gold earrings with just the slightest drop. I loved them. I'm really sad about it.

Last indulgence
I just had a spa day. I needed some time to myself where I could just relax. I loved every single second of it, and I did not feel bad at all about silencing my phone.

Last vacation I took
I went to Hawaii in January with my two sisters. None of us had ever been there before. Our word of the day, every day, was "mahalo," which means "thank you."
